In a dangerous forest, there was a little girl called Little Red Riding Hood. She lived in the forest with her mom. Her grandma was sick so she wrote a letter to Little Red Riding Hood's mom that she wanted to eat some food. Little Red Riding Hood's mom was too afraid to go since her strange power would let her harm a lot of animals. Therefore, she decided to let her daughter go instead. Little Red Riding Hood's real name was actually Angel so we could call her Angel now. Angel went to her grandma's house. Meanwhile, a very big bad wolf saw her walking down the road. He had an evil plan but it was dumb.

The big bad wolf showed up and surprised Angel. Angel was too surprised that she couldn't think of any way to escape so she punched the wolf right away when he was about to eat her. Surprisingly, the wolf was thrown knock backed a hundred miles away from Angel. Had Angel found her power? Or was it just some the wind which blew off? Keep reading to find out! Angel was happy she defeated the wolf but he could wake up any time so she kept running from the spot where she found the wolf. The wolf woke up and he found out he accidentally grabbed the letter written by Angel.

The wolf found Angel's grandma's house very quickly by his speed and his nose. The wolf opened the door but he saw nothing. Bang! A bat hit the wolf so strongly that it made him fall. Grandma's house door opened again but this time it's Angel. Angel saw grandma and the wolf on the floor. She asked "What has happened grandma? Are you okay? Did the wolf hurt you?" Grandma explained "I have special power to make myself invisible so I hid behind the door but it was the wolf, so I hit him with the bat behind the door!” Angel was happy that her grandma was okay. At last, she gave her some food and took her to Angel’s house. They lived happily together.
