A Special Summer

My parents and I joined a charity programme in Yunnan last summer. We stayed at a village school from 15th to 29th August.

The school had a poor learning environment. There were very few tables which meant that some children needed to use their legs as a table. Also, there were very few teachers so the children couldn't learn new things. We felt upset.

Luckily, before we went to Yunnan, we collected some old books and old toys. Then, we took these books to Yunnan and gave them to the children. They felt grateful. We felt so glad because we could help people in need.

Next, we taught them new things. We taught them English vocabulary so that they could communicate with people. Then we taught them how to make a necklace. It was so interesting.

At last, we said goodbye to them. They felt a bit upset but they still felt happy because we said that we will come again. They all felt overjoyed.
