

Kelly's Weekend

Kelly got good results in her exams, so her parents celebrated with her last Saturday. On Saturday morning, Kelly and her parents went to the Peak to look at the view of Hong Kong.

In the afternoon, they went to a restaurant to have a family dinner. Kelly ate a lot of food, so her mom said, "Kelly, don't eat too much food. You will get a stomach ache."

Then Kelly asked, "Dad, where will we go tomorrow?" Dad replied, "We will go to Disneyland." Kelly felt happy. However, that night, Kelly developed a stomach ache. She was in pain and felt uncomfortable.

In the end, her parents found out the reason for her pain and called the doctor to make her feel better. Kelly felt blue.

The Castle Party

Once upon a time, Princess Mary had a best friend named Prince Harry. They used to play together all the time when they were young. One day, Prince Harry wanted to visit Princess Mary and Billy the dragon because they wanted to plan a party in the castle.

They went to the kitchen and saw a refrigerator, but it was completely empty.

Then, they went to a supermarket to buy food. They wanted to buy four cartons of blackcurrant juice and two jars of jam for some bread, but they felt disappointed because the shelves were empty too.

After that, they went to a farm and saw some potatoes. Princess Mary was good at making potato chips, and luckily, Prince Harry loved to eat them.

He really enjoyed the mouth-watering chips and they both had a wonderful time at the party.

Old Days

I talked to Mum about her life when she was ten years old. There is a big difference between now and then.

Life was hard and there was almost nothing in the past. There weren't any tablet computers in her school. People wrote notes in their books. There weren't any air conditioners in her school. People used paper fans to keep cool. There were playgrounds at school. Students played hide-and-seek in the playground.

Kids didn't have many toys to play with. Nobody played games on mobile phones. Everyone played hide-and-seek. Some people played Chinese chess. My mum played it so well. Everyone played hopscotch too. Nobody played electronic games.

It was very inconvenient in the old days and there was not much entertainment in the past. Nobody had a mobile phone. My mum had a CD player when she was young. Everyone had a radio. Nobody had a tutor when she was young.

My mum thinks life was better when she was young because it was simple and easy. However, I think life is better now because there are mobile phones. It is more convenient for everyone nowadays.

Echoes of the Countryside: My Dad's Childhood in China

I recently talked to my dad about what his life was like when he was growing up in the Chinese countryside. It made me realise there is a massive difference between life back then and life today.

Life was hard in the past, and people had almost nothing. Today, we live in a modern flat, but my dad grew up in a small house that my grandparents built by hand. On hot days, we can just turn on the air conditioner or an electric fan. In the past, they had nothing but paper fans that they had to wave themselves to keep cool.

Kids also didn't have many toys to play with in the old days. My dad told me they didn't have any video games. Instead, they played hide-and-seek and finger games. Even though they were simple, he still loves those old games because he thinks they required more creativity and were more fun than the games kids play nowadays.

When my dad was young, life was incredibly simple. There were no DVD players, and nobody owned electronic gadgets. Most people didn't even have a television because they were so expensive. The few families who were lucky enough to own a TV only had a black-and-white monochrome screen!

In the end, my dad thinks that life today is much better than the old days because everything is so much more convenient for everybody—and I definitely agree with him!
